[12 marks]

Read the text. Then complete the task.

Working in a laboratory sometimes involves doing potentially-dangerous experiments. So it is important to know what you are doing and avoid problems like poisoning yourself or blowing yourself up! Therefore, before you start doing any experiments, you should read and understand the following safety rules regarding your behaviour in a lab.

- Before entering the laboratory, prepare yourself by reading thoroughly all documents describing working procedures. Also read carefully all labels and all equipment instructions before you start any task.
- Do not eat food, drink beverages or chew gum in the laboratory, and do not taste or smell any chemicals. Keep your hands away from your face, eyes and mouth while using chemicals in the lab. If a chemical splashes in your eyes or on your skin, immediately wash the affected area with running water for at least twenty minutes.
- In case of fire, make sure you know the locations and operating procedures for all safety equipment including fire extinguishers, fire blankets and first aid kit. And know what to do if there is a fire drill during working hours.
- Keep the work area clean and tidy at all times. Dispose of all chemical waste properly. Use a brush and pan to clean up any broken glass.
- Dress properly during your work. Long hair and loose clothes must be tied back. Wear safety glasses and a lab coat.
