You are going to hear a person speaking about his visit to London's main shopping centre. Listen and for each item, write a short answer (not more than FOUR WORDS).

Last year I visited London's main shopping centre in Oxford street. I walked along Oxford street. I passed hundreds of shops. There, you can buy anything in – from a pin to an elephant. I found that, you can buy clothes, shoes and toys in the larger stores like Selfridges or you can shop in the small shops.

I discovered that, English people and tourists shop in Oxford street so, it was crowded. The best-known London's store is Harrods and there, I found clothes, shoes and toys.

There were also hundreds of open air markets in London. They were selling all kinds of things: vegetables, clothes records, furniture. The two best known markets were in Petticoat lane and in Portobello Road.

Petticoat lane is on the east side of London, near Liverpool street station. The market opened on Sundays. You can buy anything there. Some of the things were very cheap. But not many things were very cheap. But not many things were both good and cheap!

Portobello Road market is in west London. You can get there by underground train. The nearest underground stations are Notting Hill Gate. The market is very busy on Saturday. You will find old furniture and antiques on many of the Portobello Road.
